

Combinations of Nutrient Concentrations and Water Treatments

The postharvest life was measured on 'CSU Red' carnations from a water conservation study at Colorado State University. This project provided combinations of growing media, mulches, nutrient concentrations, frequency of watering, different watering systems, and recycling of nutrients.

This test indicated that cut carnations are insensitive to different watering and nutrition treatments unless conditions occur causing extreme differences in growth.